Should any illness appear on vessels from Portugal, or other places infected be suspected to be infected by bubonic plague the patient or patients will be removed from the vessel and detained until all danger of infection is past.

"The bubonic plague is no new thing to be considered, from a quarantine point of view, For the past three and a half to four years we bave been making investigations as to its character and methods of propagation. We have watched its reported progress in the East, and have taken precautions to prevent its introduction into the United States through the Port of New York. About three and a half years ago I visited Egypt and made a study of the spread of bubonic plague. While there arrangements were made with a responsible agent at Sucz to keep us posted should the plague appear in Egypt or pass his station. From this agent have been received reports every two weeks since, and much valuable information has been pbtained from this source. At the same time Bombay, whence authentic reports of the plague had been received, cultures of the germs of this disease.

'In the meantime a small laboratory was prepared on Swinburne Island for the culture of these and other organisms, with a view of ty of resisting various disinfecting agents. The cultures were received and were grown at Bwinburne Island. Our investigations were Inaugurated and carried out with varying success until finally we were able to establish methods of disinfection which were absolutely certain to destroy the organism of buboniplague. Since the successful termination of these tests, these methods of disinfection have been employed at Quarantine upon all vessels prriving from ports where the plague has been reported or is suspected to exist.

Detective Petrosino of the central office was put on the case and learne that on the night of the shooting, Alemanni and Smilars had a quarrel in a James street saloon, where Smilari was employed. Petrosino could not learn that Smilari had fired the shot but ascertained that he had fled immediately

When Smilari got to Naples where he had previously lived, he ran across an old creditor. The fugitive had told of his fight with Alemanni, and his creditor informed the Neapolitan police, who arrested the man.

Under the treaty between Italy and the United States, the police say, Smilari cannot be extradited, but this Government can secure his trial in Italy for the murder by sending to the Italian Government the indictment found against him here, the findings of the Corener's jury and the police records of the crime.

NEW WAR IN SUGAR RATES.

Trust Cuts Prices and Independent Refiners

Meet the Reduction. What is believed to be the beginning of another rate war between the American Sugar Refining Company and the independent refiners was started yesterday by a cut in price of three-sixteenths of a cent a pound on all grades of refined sugar except powdered, by the American Sugar Refining Company,

Powdered sugar has been reduced in price a quarter of a cent a pound, and XXXX powdered five-sixteenths of a cent. The cut was met by the independent refiners, and there were rumors that still further reductions might be made on one side or the other.

The cause of the new cut in rates is said to have arisen in Chicago, where for some time the smaller wholesale houses have been underselling the larger ones by a margin of oneeighth of a cent a pound. The larger houses were customers of the American Sugar Refining Company, and it was believed that the arrangements were made to have forwarded smaller houses were getting their cheaper supplies from the independent refiners.

A number of large wholesale grocers from Chicago were in this city last week, and it is believed that their visit induced the American Sugar Refining Company to make the cut for their protection. The cut will apply to 250,000 barrels of sugar sold ahead up to January on a guarantee as to price, as well as to current
